Our situation is that we have an XML file stored on our web server which can be accessed through an absolute url like "" (this is not the web api, this is just what the XML file is). I'm having a little trouble getting the

API to read the file. I'm looking for a very simple way to get the contents of the file so I can parse the contents of the XML file and then return it. Does anyone have any tips on how to do this? A: You can use WebClient in a Web API project. It can be a bit tricky at first but it will make your life easy as you can start with a simple implementation and then you can build your own authentication layer, email validation etc. I'd recommend to use a custom class to wrap WebClient to offer some functionality for you and abstract away the XML parsing you need. You will then be able to implement authentication, validation etc by overriding the needed methods. Here is an example of a class I just implemented. Just create one yourself and wire up what you need. `public class WebClientWrapper { private readonly WebClient client; public WebClientWrapper() { client = new WebClient(); } public string GetStringFromWebRequest(string requestUri) return client.DownloadString(requestUri); }` MySpace.com
