the past 7 years, President Donald J. Trump has actively sought a one-on-one meeting with North Korean dictator Kim Jong Un. Each year in 2018 and 2019, Trump has sent "dear Kim Jong Un" letters, and each year, Kim has replied in a "pre-typed" letter to Trump's letter. For the most part, the letters contained a lot of compliments about President Trump's success in North Korea policy. But this year, the letters are taking a turn for the unusual. Kim Jong Un wrote and answered his own letter back to Trump (you can see all of the letters below). Perhaps his tone is a reflection of the recently elected Head of State in South Korea. Kim's letter also reads much like a statement regarding the recent summit between Trump and Kim. Here are North Korea's responses to Trump's letters. Dear Mr. President, The history of development of relations between the DPRK and the United States is inseparable from the changes of the international situation in recent decades. The United States, which was an imperialistic power in the first half of the last century, changed to a democratic country with a powerful economy in the latter half. At the same time, an independent and self-reliant nation, the Democratic People's Republic of Korea, was established. The relations between the two countries, characterized by hostility and confrontation in the past, have been moving toward resolution and cooperation. The latest round of the DPRK-U.S. dialogue took place on June 12, 2019 in Pyongyang, followed by the second DPRK-U.S. summit on June 13, 2019 in Hanoi, Vietnam. Last year, on June 12, 2018, the DPRK and the U.S. held the DPRK-U.S. summit at Panmunjom on the border between the two countries. 9df0af710a
