For more guidance, the How to know If Your Client Has an Active License? Hi, I am trying to download a license file through RDP and when I run the following from a command prompt,

I get this error message. I am currently using RDP for a small development environment and would like to connect to this machine over the internet. In my search for the answer to this question I have found people saying that the license file on the server is not valid. I would like to know if this is a problem with my network and/or how would I determine whether or not the license file is valid? I don't see why you would get this error message from the Internet: It is not possible for you to find out if your client has an active license without asking the client. The client may not tell you. You are looking for a valid license file and you are getting one without a problem. You should see the below behaviour. After a license has been activated on a new client, the license file is sent to the server. If the license file that you send to the server is invalid, the network does not get the license and the server returns the below error: ERROR: 'The license file you entered has Download the Licensing Studio.

License file has been downloaded. To see the currently downloaded version, go to the License file tab. If you are using a DGNX5 board, or the tp5 switch SWL4, you can connect to the board using a COM port. (917) 524-1566 How to know If Your
