Dev, Jhanvi, Siddharth and Radhika run into a life-threatening situation. Jhanvi, the beautiful and innocent daughter of a rich family, is abducted while trying to save her sister (child) from being shot down. The kidnappers bring Jhanvi to the hills of Nepal where her parents cannot find her. They are informed that she is being held hostage in a secret location. Siddharth, a young doctor with a good heart, who has seen and heard enough, gets Jhanvi back in his custody. As Jhanvi is returning to her beloved Siddharth, one of her kidnappers finds her. While trying to escape, she commits suicide by hanging herself. Siddharth is shattered by the suicide, but Radhika shows him love in spite of all and comforts him. For 6 months, the haematocrit levels and the weight of the red cells, white cells, plasma proteins and albumins were followed in 4 boys aged 5 to 12 years under conditions of appetite depression due to protein-energy malnutrition. The haematocrit, which was decreased throughout the study, was directly correlated with the decreased levels of the body proteins and albumins. The latter varied as the amyloidosis was going into remission, while the haematocrit remained constant. Conversely, the white cells and the plasma proteins varied as the amyloidosis was progressing; the levels of the plasma proteins decreased, but the white cells remained constant.A survey of use of human touch for pain relief in students of the Republic of Ireland during hospital emergency response.
