Or, you could swing by a pregnancy center. More specifically, you could go to the Dr. Charles C. Gardner Memorial Breastfeeding Center and Nursery in Austin, Texas. "Pregnancy is all about the baby, and it's about the mom. But I think at this stage in our life — especially given the level of pollution that we're all dealing with — we're going to be looking for innovative ways to protect the health and well-being of our children," says Ann Vail, the nursing mother. Cora Vail She will soon take delivery of a baby girl, Cora Mae Vail, but she says that for now, "I just try and be the best mom I can be." But that is a hard thing to do when you're about to have a baby and its environment is conspiring against it. It's even harder if you're a breastfeeding mother, as Vail is. "It has been a challenge," she says. "But I also
