Embroidery software 2000. English. April 13, 2020. Software Downloads on Gartner Marketscape. Description. Embroidery Software. Functional analysis and expression profiling of enzymes involved in amino acid metabolism. Metabolic enzymes play crucial roles in intermediary metabolism. Here, we explored the functions of nine genes encoding metabolic enzymes through transcriptome analysis of spermatogenic stem cells (SSCs) and spermatocytes in mouse testes. RNA sequencing revealed that SSCs and spermatocytes consistently expressed genes encoding aminotransferases, ketoacidoxidoreductases and dihydrodiol dehydrogenases. Genes encoding enzymes catalyzing  $\beta$ -alanine, nicotinate and purine metabolism are also consistently expressed. The expression levels of most enzymes involved in amino acid metabolism remained constant in SSCs, whereas most genes encoding biotin metabolism proteins were consistently expressed in spermatocytes. Based on functional analysis of the enzymes encoded by the differentially expressed genes, we propose that amino acid catabolism in SSCs is low in order to maintain SSC-specific metabolites and provide energy. On the other hand, amino acid catabolism is higher in spermatocytes in order to produce amino acid metabolites such as polyamines and spermidine to participate in spermiogenesis. Finally, we propose that proteins involved in biotin metabolism play crucial roles in modulating enzyme activities and the expression of its gene, especially in spermatocytes.
