You can also use the pen tool to create custom brushes and draw shapes to achieve special effects. This tutorial will show you how to draw custom strokes with the pen tool. Step 1 In Photoshop, open an image. Find the Pen tool on the Tools palette, which looks like a paintbrush with a line on it. Step 2 Click with the Pen tool on any area of the image where you want to draw a line. You will see a small dot appear on the canvas. Step 3 Start drawing lines with the Pen tool.

When you start drawing, you will see a line appear from the tool, and you can modify it by moving it with the scroll wheel or adjusting the curve. Click and drag with the Pen tool over the lines you want to erase to remove them. Step 4 The line will change color to indicate that it's an editable tool. So click with it to make it an active tool. If you make a mistake and want to erase the lines, click with the Eraser tool and use the Eraser tool to remove the shape. Step 5 Type a name for your new tool in the tool settings, which is under the Pen menu on the top of the toolbox. Type something like line tool #5 and choose a color for it. Photoshop will recognize your custom tool. Tip You can also draw rectangles and circles with the Pen tool. To draw a rectangle, click-and-drag the tool across the canvas and release your mouse button. To draw a circle, click-and-drag the tool until it looks like a circle. Step 6 Click with the Pen tool on a spot of the image where you want a new shape. Select the move tool, and click and drag it anywhere you want the shape to go. Acquisition in primary visual cortex of a globally coherent percept: 'centrifugal spreading'. In this experiment, we show that a moving foveal object induces acquisition of a percept of motion from a global coherent outline, in the presence of a small, non-moving background object. Visually normal subjects were tested with short (750 msec) random-dot and line motion stimuli presented on a uniform background (0.7 deg/msec mean velocity), and their brains were scanned with functional MRI while they were focused on the target. Both motion classes induced inward hemodynamic flow-rate changes in the contralateral primary visual cortex

ADVERTISEMENT "We don't want to use our military to do that, but we are going to be forced to do that," Trump said at the White House before meeting with some of the migrants in the refugee center in McAllen, Texas. Trump did not specify what type of troops would be used, but he called on the military to meet the "National Guard until it's 100 percent ready" if he orders them to the border. The president has previously vowed that any construction of a border wall be paid for by Mexico. The Department of Homeland Security (DHS) on Monday also revealed that it had deployed 1,000 National Guard troops to the southern border in response to the caravan, which so far is 1,200 miles from the border. The DHS has not provided details on what the troops are being deployed for, but it is unknown whether they will be building a physical wall or fence. The troops have been allowed to patrol roads and river crossings but have not yet been deployed to the actual border. The Department of Defense (DOD) at the time released a statement indicating that the troops would be supporting border operations. "For months, the Department of Defense, in partnership with other
