FIFA is an incredibly popular football game franchise that has been published by Electronic Arts and available on a plethora of platforms since its release in 1991. FIFA has since gone on to become the most popular sports video game of all time, and since FIFA 13 has had a continuous run of big releases. With FIFA 20, we're poised to take that to the next level with some incredible innovations. Unfortunately, we're also in a position where development is taking way too long, so we're going to have to issue a fairly stark, brutal warning to EA and our developers: it's going to take a bit longer than anyone would like. We're very sorry about this, but we feel like we need to give the game a chance to be released as intended. We need your help to make sure that game isn't delayed any further. What is happening? EA have reached out to us and offered to delay the game by approximately two years if we can put everything else on hold and focus on delivering a quality game. We're not making this decision lightly, and we're not dismissing their offer in the slightest. What does it mean for you? There's two ways this can play out: one, EA can deliver us an extra two years worth of game development and a two-year delay, giving us far more time to work on the game. Alternatively, EA could fully cancel the game and issue a full refund to all current and future owners of the game. To be clear, this will have a massive impact on us. For two years, we will be working on making the best football game of all time that we can possibly make. We'll have less time to do that, but we'll have much more time to improve that game over the two years. If you're not happy with what you get, that's understandable - that's the game we're going to be working on and it's our fault if it's not good enough for you. But you won't be able to demand a refund when we hit the two year deadline and deliver your game anyway. We also want to make sure you understand that this is not a port or a remaster of the game, and we do not plan to release a remaster of the game in any way. The only thing we'll be doing for the next two years is continuing to make the best football game of all time. And we
