Printing presses screeching, people of all ages gathered on the streets for an event that brought them together: a celebration of traditional Bastille Day. There were floats decorated in colorful national and regional styles; there was painting, dancing, and fun for all; there was drumming and singing; there were chances to feed the hungry and help those in need. People like André Leclercq heard these two distinct sounds Sunday as they walked the streets of Epinay-sur-Essonne. He was part of the group that made the scene at the Place de la Ré b7e8df5c8
