The documentation mentions that it's a function, but it doesn't actually say much about it. A: It's a function because you will invoke it like this:

backbone.sync(function(...) {... }); It's also a function because it returns a function. For example: backbone.sync(); function(...) {... } is a function so even though it is a function you don't need to wrap it in () as you can write function() {... } When you invoke backbone.sync({ one: 1, two: 2 }) it will return you a function like this function (data, options) { return _.extend(data, options); } You can then invoke it like this: var result = backbone.sync({ one: 1, two: 2 }); console.log(result); // { one: 1, two: 2 } Q: "They are not connected" error after reboot on Cisco UCS C540-24G After reboot of a Cisco UCS C540-24G with 16 SSDs, we are not able to set them, and we are getting errors like: ... Although the family has been the primary focus of women's policy, studies indicate that there are more readily accessible policy opportunities than these. Issues that are available but not necessarily readily accessible include the following: measuring the quality and growth of the family and the decline in its structure; expanding the educational and career opportunities for women and the advantages women obtain from their nativity; introducing or expanding the scope of nursing services for the family; focusing policy on the health of the family; reviewing the wide disparity in the proportion of direct income spent on children by the families of the highest and lowest income groups; and devising strategies that would reduce the number of children being born, especially out of wedlock. they would be in an ideal world. There was a possible movement to stop release outside the jurisdiction. Given the tender age of the three, though, they're being taken to Melbourne, Australia, where the protective custody process can go on for over 18 months. There are six institutions in Australia specialising in the care of kids who have had their parents charged with murder. You can't bring them across the Tasman, but Melbourne Children's Hospital is one of the best and charges $45,000 a month. As a regional provider, they often send kids out to local carers who may be more familiar and comfortable with children in these situations. It's not the best place for an isolated child but they also have the security of knowing where they are at all times. It's a big deal to think about a child being in a home 20 hours a day, seven days a week. "There are times you're going to miss them," says

I have an old compound machine and I don't know how to do the cleaning of the alcohol and the process of the accelerator. How can I properly clean up the alcohol and the accelerator? I'm afraid it will be causing damage to my paint. A: There's nothing bad that comes out when you clean up an engine using alcohol and a few other simple procedures. Oil and grease do tend to absorb into these cleaning solvents. They also "wick" into the various parts of the engine, and it doesn't sound like the engine is particularly clean. You may want to do a very light degreasing, with a mild degreaser if possible. That doesn't mean a spray washer, so don't use that. If you can spare the time and have a light 'dirt detector' (a magnet), a magnet might help. You can try some of the coolant and oil from the engine out on an oil-filled balance weight; it should have no adverse effect, but it might help. More importantly, there's no need to mix any kind of anything at all with the paint. Almost all automotive topcoats can go right on top of each other and still produce a good finish. (If the paint is already damaged, and may have thinned out, then it's more of a problem.)

A degreaser should not be listed as a solvent for the coat, but it should be listed for cleaning it off. Topcoats are usually designed to withstand a little alcohol and some light degreasing, and to be cleaned off with water. Just make sure the solvent you use is approved for use on cars, and be sure to use it on a clean, non-surfaced area first.
