Ow ouabourous as Indian court's verdict on Kashmir was struck down by India's top court, this latest move of a border town's residents has well and truly taken the collective attention of Kashmir's residents and also that of the outside world to the upcoming referendum. In the midst of all this attention has been the stone pelting, which has triggered a lot of debate and as a consequence, the Indian Army has been forced to respond with force. The community this time, has been the Muslims of the city, most of whom have been residing at a border village, due to their ancestral roots, have decided to stay put. However, their decision is not so be it, because the Indian Army is planning to enforce its curfew and seems set to treat any stone
