Q: How to get the current row of a table

that is editable? I have a table in my page that is editable. When I click on a link that directs me to the second page, this row of the table remains. And when I return to the first page, I want the row of this table still remain. I also have a script that when I select a row from the table, changes the src attribute of a div that's linked with that row. The problem is, when I return to the first page from the second page, this div loses its previous content, and I get all the content of the table. How to return the previous content of this div without losing the previous selection of the table row?

A: This is what happened?

You can say hold the row you want to display by either doing this: `data-src=""` or in this way edit and get it back: `$(".getRow").click(function() { var src = $(this).data('src');`
