I have a set of 450 points, of which 450 points fall within a bounding box, and then I'd like to create multiple training data sets to work with in a supervised classification. I am trying to use : Vector -> Raster -> Conversion -> Data defined -> Vector Coordinates -> From center point Is this what I am looking for? This seems like a bug to me because it doesn't give me a dropdown that allows me to specify the range of points as per the topic here: How do I convert UTM coordinates to decimal degrees? So I am trying to do manually as so: Select the UTM Coordinates by using the UTM Coordinates tool Export points to CSV Create a new train data set using the CSV I do not want to use the Raster vector -> Raster -> Shrink function, as that would require me to create a raster with a hard coded bounding box for all 450 points, which I'm trying to avoid. Can someone advise how I can create a training data set manually? The QGIS documentation is very unclear on the matter. Many thanks in advance. A: There is a plugin for creating a training set, but it doesn't create the training set as CSV. The only way I have come up with is to find a tool that will export
