Player intelligence in FIFA 22: As part of the Dynamic Player Motion system, each player's intelligence has been improved. Players take into account the position of the ball, teams, the goalkeeper, others on the pitch and even the energy levels of defenders, causing them to work in a smart and collective manner. Players are more aware of where they are on the pitch and more aware of what is going on around them. Referees are better: Improved referee behaviour has been implemented to raise the level of play on and around the pitch and improve refereeing. Improved ball flight distances and distribution will lead to more accurate goalkeeper positioning and open up new playing styles. Red cards have been improved to better reflect aggression, and new game logic is introduced to prevent overly rash decisions. New replay system: A match review system has been incorporated into the FIFA Live Screen with a new 'Replay' button for both live action and video replays. When selecting a decision, the player will be able to select between 'Good' or 'Advantage/Disadvantage'. Additionally, a 'Insignificant' decision has been introduced to indicate a more minor decision. The player can also choose to 'Appeal' the decision if he believes it to be wrong. Players will have a new edit button in the review screen that will allow them to re-submit the same play without starting from the beginning. Improved game management: The 'Change Formation' button has been added to the team screen, allowing players to instantly switch formations. A new 'Narrow' setting has been added to the tactics screen to adjust the game mode's difficulty and gameplay speed.

Improved User Interfaces: A refreshed 'Matchday' screen that reflects the improved player intelligence and new game management functions. Players, managers and all officials have been added to the team screen.

With the exception of American football, in FIFA the ball is played using a Soccer Ball-like model. The game features one of the largest and most complex soccer pitch models developed to date, in which the entire field is fully functional and also featured (in previous FIFA titles) 'compound' grass.
