Adobe Photoshop's Features Photoshop has come a long way since its debut in 1992 as the first widely used image editing program. Colors One of the first things any expert Photoshop user notices about Photoshop is how easy it is to change colors. The original Photoshop had only 6 colors as compared to Photoshop Elements, which has 256 colors. To view a color swatch in Photoshop, press the F5 key on your keyboard. A color bar will appear on your screen with a variety of colors. Press any key and the color will change to the color of your choice. RGB and CMYK Colors To create a color by using the RGB colors, you can use the Color Picker Tool. To change a color by using the RGB colors, click the Color Picker Tool, and drag it to a new area. To change a color by using CMYK colors, click the Color Picker Tool and select the CMYK color. Once the CMYK color changes to a CMYK color of your choice, right-click it and select the Color Range command. This will put a range of color around the one you clicked on. Image Adjustments The most common way to change an image is to use the Image Adjustments window. If you haven't used Image Adjustments, in Photoshop's Help file, you will see a description of how to use it on page 7. There is a default image adjustment in Photoshop that is used by many artists. This is called Smart Pick. To adjust colors, make sure that the Photoshop layer palette is active. If there is no layer palette or no active layer, you can create one by following the steps in the Tint, Colorize, and Burn sections. Tint The easiest way to change color with the Color Mixer Tool is to use the Tint tool. With the Color Mixer Tool, right-click it and select Tint. This will place a color icon (a yellow triangle) above the color you selected with the Color Mixer Tool. The color icon will become the tint. If you press the keyboard's Delete key after you have placed the color tint on the image, the color tint will disappear. Make sure to place the tint on a layer. If you try to tint an image that is not on a layer, you will get a message that says "Unable to apply

Tackling the incidence of missed abortion and its clinical and socio-demographic factors: a hospital based retrospective study. Missed abortion is a common event that leads to its consequences such as maternal morbidity, maternal mortality and fetal loss. The aim of this study was to determine the incidence and clinical and socio-demographic factors associated with missed abortion. In a hospital based retrospective cross sectional study, 676 patients with missed abortion were studied. Data were collected by clinical and para-clinical examinations and biochemical screening. Risk factors were identified by logistic regression and variables associated with missed abortion were determined. Of the 676 patients, 411(60.8%) had final diagnosis of missed abortion. Maternal age of more than 35years was significantly associated with missed abortion (OR:1.65;95%CI:1.48-1.82) and incidence of missed abortion was significantly higher among married women (OR:1.41;95%CI:1.13-1.76) and non students (OR:1.6;95%CI:1.35-1.85). The study showed a higher incidence of missed abortion in the third trimester. Age of mother, marital status, level of education were the main predictors of missed abortion. Therefore; we suggest that to improve the attendance of patients at adequate gestational age for termination of pregnancy, more effective strategies should be applied to remove educational and socio-economic barriers to prenatal care as a way to improve attendance.Temporal expression of matrix metalloproteinases (MMPs) and tissue inhibitors of MMPs (TIMPs) in human placentae in relation to pregnancy-induced hypertension. The authors investigated the expression and activation of matrix metalloproteinases (MMPs) and tissue inhibitors of MMPs (TIMPs) in human term placentae from normal pregnancies and pregnancies complicated by pregnancy-induced hypertension (PIH). Placentae were obtained at delivery from women with PIH and normal placentae were used as controls. The distribution of MMP-2, -3 and -9 and TIMP-1, -2 and -3 mRNAs and their protein products was examined by in situ hybridization and immunohistochemistry. MMP-2 and -3 expression in vascular endothelial and trophoblast cells and MMP-9 in all syncytiotrophoblasts was increased in the placentae from pregnancies complicated by PIH.

Jet3d Blog SAVE THE DATE Start thinking about the next video conference you want to have! Don't rush into choosing a date. First, think about the three months leading up to the event. This is a time to build excitement for your meeting and create a memorable experience for your participants. Spending time early on designing the content for your event will provide you with valuable experience and will enable you to reflect on the process. A while before the event, you can start thinking about possible activities that might be included. Of course, this is not to be confused with activities themselves, which you can prepare well in advance. What we mean is, how might the event be used to maximize learning, both for you and for the delegates? Finally, the final planning period is often referred to as "overtime." This is the period before the actual event is held. During this time, you will be planning, booking the venues, finding the food, figuring out the details, etc. At this time, it's important to think about "taking care of the details" that you don't have time to think about before the event. The Importance of a Clear Call to Action An important thing to consider during the event planning phase is an effective call to action (CTA). What are you wanting participants to take away from the event? Here's an example. The South Australian Department of Local Government and Communities run an event called Fast Forward, in which they bring the CEO of one of their state-wide agency councils together with Regional Councils in each of the nine regions. The group is tasked with coming up with new ideas to deliver better services in their region. There is one central concept that they will consider and try out during the event, so it's important that it is crystal clear. You may or may not consider a formal CTA such as "what are you trying to take away from the meeting?" or "what are you going to take away from the event?" This is largely subjective, but your CTA will change with each event, so spend some time thinking about it. Supporting Social Interaction Your CTA is important, but so is your event format. We can't stress enough that any event must be highly social. One of the best ways to ensure social interaction
