Cartoon Animator 4.1.1017.1 Pipeline Free Download With resource pack (Win Mac) Synchronization of the low potential oscillations in the cerebral cortex of the golden hamster. The functional significance of the low potential oscillations in the cortex of the hamster was studied by recording spontaneous and evoked potentials. The dorsal cerebral cortex exhibited field potentials of a low frequency (0.1 to 0.8 Hz) and of an intermediate frequency (2 to 5 Hz), but not of a higher frequency. The low frequency potentials were maximal during lateral recumbency and vertical climbing, and these activities were accompanied by similar low frequency oscillations in the blood pressure and EEG. The application of epinephrine (1 mug/kg) induced a strong increase of the slow cortical potential.

This could be blocked by a local injection of phenoxybenzamine (100 mug). A brief application of pilocarpine (5 mug) strongly depressed the spontaneous activities and induced immediate facilitation of the low frequency potentials which were absent in the presence of this agent. These results show that the activation of the slow potentials was probably mediated by a release of norepinephrine from the hippocampus.
