Many people are questioning whether the bubble is fake or not. After all, it's now the biggest correction since 2013. So, could a bear market be the new normal? Or should a new bull run start right now? While using the market cycle as a predictor of future price action is accurate, it assumes that everything goes according to the cycle, and that timing is always spot on. When something goes wrong, we say it's a departure from the cycle. However, it's not only about cycles. Even if there's a perfectly synchronized market, a certain amount of panic will always seep in with fear. And with panic, the markets move down until the fear is gone. And that's exactly what's going on right now. The biggest force of this panic is the central bank. Fed's actions led to two major problems for Bitcoin. First, it scared off new investors who then decided to allocate capital into traditional assets, turning the cryptocurrency into a commodity. Which brings us to the second point: central banks both increase and decrease money supply, and the value of money is actually a function of supply and demand. Before, we had $1 billion of supply with $8 billion demand. Now we have $8 billion in supply with $1 billion demand. The price of Bitcoin is now artificially suppressed. "It is unlikely that the Bitcoin narrative is going away anytime soon, and it' d0c515b9f4

The Soccerroos are on the way to their first official training camp in Qatar as preparations for the 2018 FIFA World Cup in Russia draw to a close. The Soccerroos squad was officially announced on Tuesday ahead of their departure to the Middle East as head coach Bert van Marwijk names a 23-man squad to travel to the Gulf country. Shai Hope, Tom Rogic, Matt McKay, Brett Holmstead, Trent Buhagiar, Mathew Leckie, Andrew Nabbout, Daniel Arzani and Tomi Juric are among those to feature in the training camp. OPTACardiac transplantation in the elderly. Cardiac transplantation remains the only definitive treatment for end-stage heart disease. However, most donor hearts are rejected due to the lack of suitable organs. In the last decade, the use of cardiac transplantation in the elderly has evolved from a life-threatening procedure to a treatment option for appropriately selected patients. Five years after transplantation, the mortality rate of cardiac transplantation in the elderly has been shown to be the same as that of younger patients. However, it is critically important to control important complications such as renal failure, gastrointestinal bleeding, and anemia, in the elderly population. Despite the need for earlier and more frequent use of immunosuppression in the elderly, it is now routine to wait 4 to 6 months from the time of heart transplantation to initiate cyclosporine A. The use of tacrolimus in the early posttransplant period may enhance the benefits of this potent immunosuppressant agent. Overall, transplantation in the elderly has become an accepted treatment for heart failure, especially for those who are not good candidates for conventional treatment.
