Giuliani, a former federal prosecutor and defense attorney, said on "Fox News Sunday" that while he hasn't completely ruled out Trump as a candidate, the chances of him winning the Republican primary are slim. "I'd bet a lot of money he would not win the primary," he said. ADVERTISEMENT "I think she'd beat him. I think Cruz would beat him. And I think Kasich would beat him," Giuliani added. Giuliani's comments come after Trump declared he's running for reelection. The president last month revoked his campaign's official status, making him the first candidate in modern political history to run for office without a formal candidacy. Since that announcement, he has faced criticism for a series of attacks on Democrats, while Giuliani said he has "nothing to do" with them. "This is a man who's said, quite frankly, about half the things he's been accused of in the last six months. So I have nothing to do with them. It's news to me," he said. Giuliani's comments

The public figure has always been healthy, and it would not be a surprise if he is more durable than most football stars. On Monday, Messi played for Barcelona in the first leg of the Champions League final in England, and he suffered two torn hamstring muscles.
