There is a washing machine water leak

There are several various difficulties that can lead to water leaking from your washing machine, including loose or clogged hoses, troubles with the water pump, problems with the door seal, and even rust buildup. Finding the cause of the leak and fixing it as soon as you can is crucial if your washing machine is dripping water. If the leak is not stopped, it may seriously harm your flooring or your neighbor's ceilings.

water pump issue

Your washing machine leak might potentially be caused by a broken water pump. This part is in charge of transferring the water from your tub to the drain and helps to prevent leaks in the event that it breaks or has to be replaced. There are a few actions you can take to check the status of your water pump if you think it may not be functioning correctly. To find the water pump, first, turn off the machine's power and remove the access panel. Next, look for any visible damage indicators, such as leaks or cracks.
